St. Pius/Archdiocese Boiler System Status Summary
November 30, 2018

The boiler system serving both the Archdiocese and its buildings, and St. Pius X High School and its buildings, was put into operation in approximately 1966 when the campus was St. Joseph College, later to be known as the University of Albuquerque. There are two high pressure steam boilers and a distribution system from the boilers to all buildings that supply domestic hot water and steam for heating purposes. These boilers and the distribution system need regular testing, chemical balancing and other mechanical adjustments to keep the system going.

St. Pius and the Archdiocese entered into a Utility Fund Agreement on March 13, 1998, under which St. Pius was allocated 60% of the cost of various utilities, including the boiler/heating system, and the Archdiocese was allocated 40% of such costs. The parties established a fund and contribute to that fund each month for various utility charges. The cost of maintaining and of replacing the boiler system would be paid on the same basis.

The boilers over time have run down through extended use, and frequently fail to deliver the necessary steam. The operator of the system, Deacon Burt Dohle, who succeeded his father as the operator of the system, is nearing retirement and has warned that the system cannot last much longer. There was a complete collapse of the steam and return condensate lines to St. Clare Hall (one of the Catholic Center buildings) in August, 2017. Ultimately, it was determined that St. Clare would be taken off the boiler system with a replacement new heating system. The cost of that conversion was $58,000. Many of the other buildings faced similar disruptions in service. Because the boilers themselves are no longer manufactured, replacement parts are difficult or impossible to obtain, and the underground distribution system is deteriorating and difficult to repair as well. It was determined to explore other replacement alternatives that would be energy efficient and newer.

In May 2018, Trane US Inc. was called in to perform an energy efficiency audit of the system to determine if it would possible to guarantee that their cost of replacement of the whole system, amortized over the life of a loan to construct such replacements, would pay for itself in energy/utility cost savings over that period. Trane determined that it could offer that guarantee. Trane estimated that the system could last another year or two, or that it could collapse at any time.

Trane estimated that the cost of such energy efficient replacements would be in excess of $3.2 Million Dollars.
